J.B. Duke

SON OF WASHINGTON DUKE

INDUSTRIALIST

PHILANTHROPIST

1856 - 1925

James Buchanan Duke was born near Durham, North Carolina on December 23, 1856. In December, 1924, James B., son of Washington Duke and by far the wealthiest member of the family, established The Duke Endowment as a permanent trust fund with designated beneficiaries. In so doing, he was following the family's long-standing patterns of philanthropy. In 1892, Washington Duke had helped a Methodist-related institution, Trinity College, relocate to Durham. A new university built around Trinity was to be the prime beneficiary of the Duke Endowment, and at the insistence of Trinity President William Preston Few, the college was re-chartered as Duke University in honor of Washington Duke and his family. James B. Duke died in New York City on October 10, 1925, and is interred with his father and brother in the Memorial Chapel on the campus of Duke University.

J. B. Duke's establishment of The Duke Endowment enabled the chartering of Duke University.
